New Lanark Mill

New Lanark World Heritage Site is a unique 18th century Mill Village sitting alongside the River Clyde. Founded in 1785 with a focus on the welfare of mill workers, New Lanark became a model for industrial communities, until the last mill closed in the 1960s. A subsequent restoration programme resulted in New Lanark becoming a World Heritage Site in 2001. At the visitor centre, your clients can learn the story of the mill, while nearby is the Falls of Clyde wildlife reserve with its birds of prey and waterfalls.
